Copyright Notice for The Karigar Index, Research Dashboard Built by Rehaan Kumar

Under the Copyright Act, 1957 of India, copyright protection arises automatically upon the creation of an original work and does not depend on registration. The Government of India's Copyright Office recognises that copyright comes into existence as soon as a work is created and that no formality is required to acquire it. Registration remains optional and primarily serves as prima facie evidence of ownership in the event of a legal dispute.

Accordingly, the original source code, website design, data visualisations, written content, research presentation, analytical framework, user interface, documentation, and all other original creative elements developed for The Karigar Index are protected under Indian copyright law from the moment of their creation. As the creator of these original works, I am entitled to assert copyright ownership in them, subject to any applicable third-party licences, permissions, or legal limitations.

Where applicable, the underlying research, interview data, photographs, and other referenced materials remain subject to their respective ownership, permissions, and attribution requirements. The Karigar Index presents these materials for educational and research purposes while acknowledging their original sources.

The use of the notice "© 2026 The Karigar Index. All rights reserved." is therefore appropriate. The copyright symbol serves as public notice that the original content and design of this platform are protected by copyright and that the associated rights are reserved by the copyright owner. This copyright notice is distinct from trademark protection, which is governed by separate laws and registration requirements.
